

GCEA Committees

Global Clinical Engineering Alliance conducts its operation through a committee structure in compliance with its Constitution and Bylaws. These documents describe their committees' function, membership, and their service term. An ongoing effort is made to represent on each committee a reflection of GCEA membership (location, practice, gender, experience, etc.)

Each committee chairperson is responsible to serve in a fiduciary role to guide their committee operation, recruit, and train new committee members, engage all its members, stimulate the exchange of experiences and creativity, and sustain timely reporting protocol to facilitate obtaining Council support for the committee direction, proper use of resources and their committee operations by the Advisory Council of GCEA.

Publication Committee

The Publication committee is responsible for expanding the trusted name of the clinical engineering field throughout the world. It uses online tools such as the GCEA website, electronic media communications, CE brand merchandising, to create and sustain international access to sources desired by the profession. An important activity of this Committee is the affiliation with the Global Clinical Engineering journal as an outreach channel.

The development of networking of national CE associations, international organizations, industry, government agencies, the public, and other healthcare delivery stakeholders is better served when we work together in harmony. This Committee's role is to reach these entities and build bridges for international cooperation and recognition for the evolving clinical engineering field.

Committee Member Responsibilities: Ethics, Privacy, Integrity, Confidentiality & Transparency

Each Committee Member shall perform their duties in accordance with the GCEA Constitution, Bylaws, and applicable policies, and shall uphold the highest standards of professional integrity, neutrality, and ethical conduct. Members shall protect confidential and non-public information obtained through committee work—including member data, draft documents, contracts, and similar communications—and shall use such information only for authorized GCEA purposes. Members shall comply with all privacy requirements and data-handling rules established by GCEA, including limiting access to personally identifiable information to a strict “need-to-know” basis, using approved communication channels, and promptly reporting any suspected privacy or security incident. Members shall avoid conflicts of interest and shall disclose any actual, potential, or perceived conflict (including financial, professional, institutional, or personal relationships) as soon as it arises; when a conflict exists, the Member shall recuse themselves from related discussions, evaluations, voting, and decisions as directed by the Committee Chair. Any misuse of position, data, or influence is prohibited and may result in removal from the committee and other corrective action consistent with GCEA governance.
